

Big AI vision, slow movement?

2 messages

Prateek Karn [REDACTED]

Thu, Dec 4, 2025 at 8:39 AM

Hi Mr. [REDACTED]

I'll keep this brief - because most CEOs we work with are facing the same quiet pressure: They announce bold AI ambitions...

but inside the organisation, behaviour barely changes.

Competitors move faster, pilots multiply without traction, and the moment the gap becomes visible, the board's doubts land squarely on the CEO - not the teams.

It's the reputation-level pain CEOs rarely admit openly:

Initiatives praised in meetings stall in execution.

Leadership alignment looks strong until real decisions are needed.

Analysts start hinting the company is "lagging," shaping the narrative before results can catch up.

Behind closed doors, CEOs describe the same frustrations:

Millions spent but nothing scales beyond pockets.

Middle managers nod in presentations but block change later.

No clean, defensible story for the board - just scattered activity and rising pressure.

And it's rarely the technology that fails - it's the system around it:

A culture not ready to adopt, leaders not fully aligned, and a business not pulling AI into real impact.

[REDACTED] we've been helping CEOs break this pattern-building digitally accelerated cultures through structured, time-bound interventions that align leadership, build capability, and sustain adoption long after pilots end.

If this resonates, we can connect for a quick call sometime this week or next.

Just reply back and I'll set it up at a time convenient for you.

Warm regards,

Prateek

--

S [REDACTED] Fri, Dec 5, 2025 at 12:40 PM

[REDACTED]

Hi,

Would like to understand the proposition. We can connect for a call early next week.

Thanks & Regards,

SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT [REDACTED]

[REDACTED]